HONGEONG, SEPTEMBER 23ED, 1898.

A vesy able and suggestive report on the trade of Shaughai for last year has been compiled by Mr. Consul Jamieson, a copy of which we received by the last mail. It opens with the gratifying gemark that although the trade of Shanghai for 1892 has not resulted in any great profits to the foreign merchant, it has, on the whole, been fairly satisfactory. A little further on, however, Mr. Jamieson refers to the great silver difficulty, and after mentioning the collapse of the New Oriental Bank and the reconstruction of the Chartered Mercantile Bunk, he says :- "Other banks, though " "less severely pinched, have been constrained "to keep a large portion of their capital "in a liquid condition to meet possible sterl-"ing demands, and consequently have been "unable to give the usual facilities to many "of their old customers. Credit has thus "been greatly restricted and the development "of business other than on old established "lines has been checked." In this short passage Mr. Jamieson bascorrectly diagnosed the evil from which the China trade, including the trade of this Colony, has for some time past been suffering. All the authorities seem now to be sgreed that the general trade, meaning thereby the exchange of merchandise, has during the period depression from which we have so long suffered been proceeding on sound and moderately remunerative lines, and so for as this Colony is concerned we bear no hing now of the "sad fate of the island of St. Thomas" being in store for us. What we have been suffering from a simply a scarcity of cash to finance new enterprises or develop old ones and a general decline. value. There is a feeling abroad, however, that we have at last turned the corner, or at been compelling merchants to after their but when the silver difficulty is settled and import trade. Under the indent system Colony the establishment of cotton mills the Chinaman becomes "the real mer- will offer a favourable opening for its em-"chant, for he takes all the risk and "gets all the advantage of a favourable "turn of the market, while the foreigner is marks are worthy of careful consideration :- not exceeding $96,000 on Gaol extension."

our merchants on the spot, and their status and independence is a question of national importance, and not one merely affecting their personal interests.

Hundreds of obstacles may be thrown in the way of trade by obstinate or interested officials, as witness the transit pass question now being fought out in the Canton province, and these can only be successfully encountered on the spot. But if it is known that importers have no interest whatever in goods after they are landed and paid for, their complaints of ossotions and squeezes, however injurious to British trade in general, will have but small chance of being

The change is another illustration of the many evils created by the unateadiness of the exchanges. So long as the relation between gold and eliver remains in the same processous condition as at present, so long will the indent form of ballness be the only safe method. Last year there was a tall in the gold value of aliver of some 9 per cent., and in 1501 there was a similar fall of about 12 per cent. Next year there may be an equally great or a greater fall, or there tay be an equally great res. In either cease one set of operators must lose and another set must rain. It is not the mere low price of tilly an that gain. It is not the mere low price of silver that in complained of, but the unsteadings. This fall in gold prices must necessarily neutralise the effect of the fall in silver as a bounty on the export trade of silver countries, and had exchange have seen as great or an evén greater increase in the export trade of China than that which has actually taken place. As Mr. Jamieson says, cheap ocean freights have also assisted to a considerable extent bringing about the increase. tural tendency of trade to develop, independently of fortuitous circumstances. must likewise be taken into account. Pigmy, who died metals in any appreciable quantity, it is evident that her purchasing power of foreign of her exports. The expansile character of the export trade indicates therefore great br ught. possibilities in the import trade.

And this leads us to a portion of the report which may prove usefully suggestive for this growth of the cotton industry at Shanghai. Mr. Jaimeson says the figures showing the supply from the Shanghai Cotton Cloth Mill " are as yet but small, "cannot so far seriously affect the domand "for English made cloths," but as there is every probability that the output will grow he places the figures side by side with the foreign article for purposes of comparison. And when we look at these figures we do no find the local production so very small. The import of English drills last year amounted to 154,000 pieces and the output of the Shanghai mill was 40,000 pieces, or more than a fourth of the total imported from England.

In the case of sheetings 60,000 pieces were manufactured locally, which is rather less than one-tenth of the quantity imported from England. Of these two articles much larger quantity comes from America. than from England, and if we take the total import no doubt the local duction looks rather small beside it, but be remembered that the industry is as yet in its infancy. The figures for cotton yarn are also interesting. The quantity manufactured locally last year was 22,500 piculs, while the quantity imported from Bombay was 692,000 piculs and from England 16,552 piculs. Both the cloth mill and the yarn mull are working to their doubtful. Mr. JAIMESON BAYS :-

Both these mills, though nominally owned by priyate companies, are, in reality, semi-official concerns The clot mill in particular is generally understood to be controlled and directed by one of the highest lacanas, in the province of Toledo, with disofficials in the Empire, hence the jealousy with which the quasi-monopoly originally granted to it is guarded.

WITTY AFTER DINNER TALK.

SOME BRIGHT SPEECHES WHICH WERE DELIVERED OVER THE WINE. After dinner specches have become the repository of much of the most enjoyable humour and graceful repartee that has found utterauce. A wealth of wit has been uncorked with the champagne; to sparkle for the moment and yanish like the head in the crystal gobiet. It was in great part at the table, in olub or inn, that Dr. Johnson gave out his readlest sallies, and namble indeed is the house whose walls have not echood to after-dinner pleasantry. Embalmed. in tradition, the reliquary of the unwritten, we. find many curious instances of the rendy wit of some of our great men. At a dinner in Boston to William M. Evarts. then Secretary of State, the toastmaster introduced Mr. Evarts by calling attention to the fact that, "When we sat down we contemplated a goose stuffed with tage; I beg to introduce to on a sage stuffed with goose." At a banquet given to the great orator.

Edward Everett he was introduced by Judge

Story, who took occasion to perpetrate this excellent pun .- " Applause shall follow in the footstens of fame wherever it goes." L verett's complimentary rejoinder was that "Aspirants for position in the temple of fame would never ascend higher than one story. Campbell, the English poet, created consternaliterary friends by proposing the health of Napoleon Bonaparte. A murmur of surprise went round the table, and one patriotic Briton asked how he dared make so bold as to propose Napoleon's health to a company of Englishmen. He once, hanged a publisher," replied Campbell, and the glassos were drained obserfully.-Kats Field's Washington.

DRUGS IN CIGARETTES.

THE INCREDIENTS USED IN MANUFACTURING

DIFFERENT BRANDS. The details of the manufacture of cigarettes are kept to a greater or less degree a secret by the manufacturers, each of whem has his, own seculiar combination of tobaccos. None of the brands on the market is composed of one kind only. This recipe is not divulged outside of the firm. But this is not all. The original mixture is merely a basis for artificial flavouring. To begin with, various essential oils are added. The list of these includes rose. rose geranium, vanilla bean, Tonka bean and liquorice root. These ingredients are added after the tobacco has been chopped into shreds in readiness to be rolled into cigarettes. Finally the particular drug chosen, in the thaps of a liquid solution, is sprayed on the material with an atomizer, while the tobacco is stirred and mixed. The quantity employed is very carefully judged, so many drops being allowed for each cigarette. For obvious reasons I cannot mention "Ob, auntle is lying in a stuper. She bardly all the drags that are used in the manufacture of oigarettes, but there is no doubt that spinm, valerian, and cannabis indica are utilized to the largist extent. Eeach manufacturer may be said to create a special drug babit among those who smoke his brand, so that they are not satisfied with any other. - Troy Times.

To illustrate the vast scope of the work the Secul following facts are submitted for consideration: Chalmers Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples Sarawak this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherte pub-

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which British very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion-

DAUGHTER." &c. CHAPTER XXVII.

LOVERS. Fidelia woke next morning with a sweet strong same of happiness. Her first sensation was all of happiness—exquisite happiness. Why was the happy even for that first delightful moment? Surely the had much to trouble her, and make her auxious and afraid. The very relationship into which she had allowed herself to be drawn with Japhet Bland was enough to embarrass her and to make her alarmed.

The fearful suspictors she had formed about him, and the reckiess resolve she had made to discover his secret by her own unaided skill. must have filled her with a sense of tramendous and almost in colorable responsibility." All this came back upon her only too soon and drenched as with a cold shower her bright warm same of happiness

But the cause of that first and most grateful feeling was olvar. That day Gerald was to see her for the first time since the night on the Embunkment. She had not accompanied Lady Sourdale on any of her visits to the hospital to see him. Lady Scardale would not hear of such a thing, and Fidelia, impatient as she was, consenied to represe her impatience, and to housen conventionality that her days might be long in the land. This morning, then, he was to come; they were to b. together for the first time after that long and anxious separaton. · She was to see blm again. She had so many things to say to him. Her heart best quickly her eyes lighted with joy. Ah! but then came the thought-there were things shout which she must not talk to him. That brought a chilling sensation upon her, the knowledge that there was something which was weighing on her mind, anthwhich she must not tell to Gerald. . FAr a while she was inclined to blame hersel keeply, to reproach her elf bitterly, because she had allowed land to enter into any intimacy of talk with her, because she had allowed herself even for a moment listened to his love-making. her." poor Fidelia said, proudly, "She knows way." Then, again, the poor perplexed girl tried to in tify herself to herself. How could she help her suspicio s? And was she not justified in trying to find out whether they had reason behind them or not?

Aiready she knew for a certainty that she was right when she auspected or guessed that Profuseur Bostock was really Japhet Bland; and was she not yu-tifled in thinking that that pirce of persion might mean other mysteries in which there might be dunger to the life of her lover? Surely a girl was bound to rink something, to risk even misinterpretation, to defend the life of
